equation: $R = \text{Rydberg Constant}$ $1.0974 \times 10^7 \text{ m}^{-1}$; λ is the wavelength; n is equal to the energy level (initial and final) If we wanted to calculate energy we can adjust R by multiplying by h (planks constant) and c (speed of light)

The energy of a photon of light = hf and the work function (f) is the minimum energy required to remove an electron from the surface of the material. So we can see from the equation above that if the light does not have a big enough frequency (f) so that the photon has enough energy to

It is expressed in two forms: the Helmholtz free energy F , sometimes called the work function, and the Gibbs free energy G . If U is the internal energy of a system, $P V$ the pressure-volume product, and $T S$ the temperature- entropy product (T being the temperature above absolute zero), then $F = U - T S$ and $G = U + P V - T S$
